Operation Overpass

Every county in the northern counties participated in Operation Overpass!

Loomis Overpass - Just one of 4 in Placer County

Placer County was just one of the many counties participating in "Operation Overpass". What a great experience. Virtually every team reported continual honking, thumbs up, waving and cheers. Some individuals even drove over the overpasses and took brochures.

Just in case anyone has heard the rumor the the State of Jefferson is a "dead movement", this weekend reveals that this is a growing movement with determined individuals who only want equal representation.

Here is a report from Shasta County that occurred today and is representative to all counties where there is a "stalemate" with their BOS.

Shasta Jefferson Committee Townhall " Freedom and Liberty"
Speakers are Mark Baird and Steve Baird

"We want to send a message to government that this is a movement for the people, by the people, and we're not going to let the government stand in the way of equal representation for the people of the North State," Baird said. "We'll be talking about our plans in Shasta County. Since the Board of Supervisors refuses to listen to what we even have to say, we're going to use another method to get a declaration in Shasta County."

At the heart the movement are calls for representation for rural Northern California counties and residents. Baird said the Jefferson model would ensure one state senator and at least one assembly person for each county in the new state, returning to a legislative structure similar to one used in California up until the mid-1960s.

The idea to form a state of Jefferson originated from protests in Siskiyou County in 1941 over states' apathy toward counties in Northern California and southern Oregon. The current push only includes California counties, which could potentially separate from the state legally under Article 4, Section 3 of the U.S. Constitution. However, the idea would have to be approved by a majority of California voters and a majority of Congress.
